
FED WEEK

The Federal Reserve meets this week to hold its two day FOMC meeting. We expect Chairman Powell to reinforce his recent comments signaling an openness to cut interest rates if necessary and pledging to keep a close watch on fallout from a deepening set of disputes between the U.S. and its largest trading partners. We expect Powell to either adjust language about future rate cuts (possibly removing the word “patient”) and/or actually cut the target Fed Funds rate this week. These would be the correct monetary policy actions given recent economic and market conditions.

Fed funds futures markets price in a 20% chance of a rate cut this week and an 85% chance of a rate cut by July. The U.S. 90 day T-Bill yield (an excellent leading measure of where the Federal Funds rate should be) has declined from 2.50% to 2.20% since March. Coupled with the expected real growth rate embedded in the 10-Year Treasury Yield falling from 1.00% to 0.42% since January 2019, the bond market is giving a clear signal for the Fed to adjust rate policy. What matters more than the exact timing and magnitude of a possible rate cut is Powell’s ability and willingness to telegraph a monetary policy that will reflect real economic conditions unfolding. As long as trade policy uncertainty exists, the Fed should continue to be ready with further monetary accommodation should a trade war ignite. If a surprise rate cut happens this week, investors should view it as a preemptive move against trade policy uncertainty. With over $1 trillion of excess reserves in the banking system and GDP growth remaining steady, there is little to no immediate recession risk.

But the Fed shouldn’t be worried about or considering cutting rates due to current liquidity or growth concerns. They need to be looking ahead and considering the unknown, specifically future trade policy. If China trade negotiations devolve into a global trade war the Fed needs to have laid the groundwork for an aggressive easing of monetary policy into an economic slowdown. If a China trade deal is made the Fed should quickly abandon rate cut language and return to a normalization of higher interest rates that follow higher real economic growth.

We continue to favor U.S. Equities and lean optimistically because we believe: 1. The Fed learned its lesson in 2018 and will not orchestrate another deflationary mismatch. 2. A China trade deal will be reached before a global trade war results. We think Powell reiterates point one this week.

Fixed Income

Bonds are an asset class that does well in a deflationary policy environment (Low Growth & Strong Currency)

We have long said the Treasury bond bubble will pop again as it did from May2013-Jan2014 when long term Treasury bonds fell 18%. With voters choosing Trump's pro-growth agenda to ignite growth, we believe the this is even more likely. Treasury bond prices are at risk to fall 30-50%, and we expect any moves higher in bond prices (lower in yields) to be short-lived. Since most other bonds price off of Treasury yields, fixed income in general is a risky asset class.

Commodities

A change in the price of gold is a change in the value of the currency. When gold rises, the currency's value falls and vice versa. Commodities are an asset class that does well when the currency is weak.

If growth is slowing while the currency weakens, there is stagflation. Own precious metals.

If growth is accelerating while the currency weakens, there is an inflationary expansion. Own agriculture, industrial and energy commodities.

Commodities suffered heavy losses in the strong US Dollar environment 2012-2015. In 2016 Dollar weakness was caused by election uncertainty and commodities rallied. That weak Dollar trend was reversed by Election2016. The demand for transactional and asset based Dollars will rise if Trump's pro-growth policies are implemented and fall if his policy agenda fails. Gold's recent decline back below $1,300/oz is a confirmation of better policy and rising growth rates. Capital is beginning to leave safe haven asset classes as policy uncertainty diminishes.

Real Estate

Real Estate is an asset class that performs well when growth is accelerating. When rising growth is coupled with a strong currency, own real estate tied to business activity (like commercial REITS). When rising growth is coupled with a weak currency, own real estate tied to commodities (farmland).

Commercial RE will be helped by improving real economic growth. RE properties leveraged to businesses & economic growth are preferred under pro-growth US policies.

US Equity

We have been waiting for a 1980s/90s type of policy driven equity bull market for sixteen years. The 2014 midterm House/Senate/gubernatorial election shifts put us on the path as pro-growth candidates propelled the GOP to majorities. It was a repudiation of anti-growth economic policies and a big step toward a Reagan/Clinton type of equity bull market. Despite the voters' growth signal, Obama doubled down on his tax/spend/regulatory (EPA) agendas in 2015 causing stocks to be range bound and volatile. As 2016 began, policy uncertainty ahead of November's elections became the biggest threat to equities. The ebb and flow of the presidential political season moved markets in both directions as investors waited to learn which policy theme would prevail in November – growth vs. redistribution. Voters decisively made their choice in Election2016, and growth won. Trump's pro-growth policy agenda beat Hillary's anti-growth policy agenda in landslide fashion. Republicans retained control of the Senate, House and increased their control of governorships by three. The policy stage is now set for Trump and Congress to keep delivering pro-growth tax, regulatory and monetary policies. As they do, a bull market in U.S. equities will ignite to rival the 1980s/90s

POLICY MAP

Growth increased versus last week (.25 to .41): Despite pro-growth tax and regulatory policy improvements since 2016, growth has tipped into negative territory over fears of a 2008-style, deflationary monetary policy mistake.

Value of US$ was decreased versus last week (0.62 to 0.63): Dollar had been stable between gold $1,300-$1,375/oz, and recently strengthened to $1,230/oz. This strong Dollar signal gave the Fed room to pause rate hikes until economic and market data calm down.

BOND YIELD COMPONENT ANALYSIS

Nominal Yield: 2.10% (0%) Inflation Expectation Component: 1.68% (0-3) Real Growth Component: 0.42% (+20%)

Real growth exited the range of .30-.70 to the upside after 2017 tax cuts. In recent weeks growth expectations embedded in bond market have dislocated from equity markets. The collapse in real growth so far seems caused by global bond market dynamics, not a significant deterioration in U.S. policy outlook. But with trade policy uncertainty high, the Fed should address the need for lower interest rates soon than later to prevent a Q42018 deflationary policy mistake.
